I snatched a pistol from a cot near the door in my office, and told him, if he interfered further with my property, I would shoot him. Upon this he desisted, and left the premises with some insulting language upon his tongue. No notice or summons was ever sent for me to appear before the judge; and the first intimation I had of any complaint against me, except by hearsay through the British vice-consul, was by the entrance of the soldiers on my premises to take me to prison. I addressed a note to the promoter fiscal, correcting his error that I had treated with contempt any order of the judge for my appearance in his court, to which the fiscal replied that he knew little further of the matter than what he had gathered from rumor. As to Mr. Letchers assertion, in his despatch to Mr. Webster, dated July 27, page 13, that I had led him into error in regard to the place of my imprisonment, I would say that Mr. Letcher had no need to have been egregiously misled. The note to Sr. Matilde Romero, dated June 12, 1852, on page 10 of this correspondence, was enclosed with my note of June 14 to Mr. Letcher, herein referred to, in which it is expressly stated by me that the jailor said he would not take the responsibility of confining me in such a room, but...
