Excerpt: .combined with a complete system of phonetics., IfThe child who uses these books starts with a big advantage, for the Mother Goose rimes which he already knows form the basis of the stories. This development from the known to the unknown accords with the best pedagogy. Children are extraordinarily enthusiastic about the Story Hour Readers. IfFive simple steps form the entire development of each lesson--the telling of the story, the dramatization, the blackboard work, the work with the perception cards, and the reading from the books. Each step seems to the pupils like play, and l?ads naturally to the next. IfIn the conventional phonetic readers, the reading material is made to fit the phonetics and is often artificial and mechanical. In the Story Hour Readers the adaptation of the phonetics to the reading material keeps up the interest and the action, and makes the...
