Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Pursuant to a congressional request, GAO provided information on whether: (1) the Environmental Protection Agency s (EPA) proposal is the most effective approach for identifying and repairing vehicles that exceed emission standards; and (2) EPA has studied alternative test procedures to reduce emissions from motor vehicles. GAO found that: (1) there are drawbacks to the IM240 test procedure for both the identification and repair of out-of-compliance vehicles which could hamper the test procedure s effectiveness; (2) over 25 percent of the vehicles that EPA tested using the IM240 test failed an initial test but passed a second emissions test, even though no repairs were made; (3) vehicles that fail the IM240 test may be more difficult to repair because of trouble in diagnosing the cause of emission problems, mechanics not being trained in emission repairs for high-technology vehicles, and the inability of repair shops to afford IM240 equipment to replicate emission tests and determine whether repairs were effective; (4) EPA has suggested to states that they could use an alternative to IM240 if the alternative were an effective substitute, but states are reluctant to evaluate another option due to lack of expertise or resources; and (5) some state officials believe the proposed EPA inspection and maintenance (IM) regulation is ambiguous about when EPA is proposing to allow states with seriously polluted areas to make a commitment to a specific IM test procedure.
