The influence of-the seasons in producing particular forms of disorder.--The recollection of the fact, that at the different seasons of the year some diseases are more prevalent than at other periods, will greatly aid a judicious parent in the early detection of the presence of disorder, and its kind, in her child. Thus, in the early part of the winter, what is called catarrh, viz. an increased secretion of mucus from the membranes of the nose, fauces, and airtubes, with fever, and attended with sneezing and cough, thirst, lassitude, and want of appetite, is generally prevalent. As the winter advances, the air-tubes of the lungs, and the lungs themselves, are liable to become the seat of disorder; and those...
